Each year an estimated 70 million animals in the United States of America and 3 million animals in Britain, are maimed, blinded, scalded, force-fed chemicals, genetically manipulated, and otherwise hurt and killed ("Animal Testing/ Yes or No?" 1). All this is done by private institutions, household product and cosmetics companies, government agencies, educational institutions, and scientific centers ("Animal Testing/ Yes or No?" 1). Any being capable of feeling anything, whether it is pain or pleasure or any kind of positive or negative state of consciousness, must be treated with respect (Cottrán 34). Animals can feel the pain of shampoo or soap in their eye just as well as any human being can. Also, animals can get frustrated and bored with their lives in their living conditions (Finsen 13). Therefore, in no case whatsoever should an animal be used in cosmetic or in other form of research, also sometimes known as vivisection.

The dictionary definition of vivisection is "the painful treatment of living animals for the purposes of scientific research." ("What is Vivisection" 1). People began to use vivisection on animals more than two thousand years ago (Woods 5). Humans saw animals as lower forms of life and thought that they were only put on earth to serve humans (Guemsey 7). The belief that humans are superior to other creatures is very old. An example of this is in the Bible, God gives humanity power over "the fish of the sea and over the birds in the air... and over all the earth and over every creeping thing that creeps upon the earth." (Woods 7). Live creatures, both humans and non-humans, were first used to fulfill the anatomical interests of scientists (Monamy 8). Most people did not think that animals had any feelings so they were treated just like machines (Woods 5). Early experiments were done without the use of any anesthetics so they were very painful (Monamy 8). But, one scientist, when investigating the anatomy of the brain, preferred to vivisect pigs to avoid seeing the unpleasant _expression of the ape (Monamy 8).

Finally, in the 19th century people decided that vivisection had to stop (Guemsey 7). So the antiscruelty movement began and, groups started to form (Guemsey 8). There are three main reasons that people began to see animal experimentation as wrong. The first reason is the increase in knowledge about the natural world due to developments in all areas of science (Fox 8). The second is the rise of ecology as a major scientific field, and the resulting changes that began to occur in people's thinking about nature (Fox 8). The last is the general expanding of moral concern for all living things (Fox 9). The idea that it is morally wrong to eat animals has been around for over a thousand years but there was no political movement during any of these times (Finsen 24).

The earliest legislative effort to protect animals from cruelty is actually American (Finsen 42). In 1641 the Puritans of Massachusetts Bay Colony voted to establish the "Bodies of Liberties" which was a document containing one hundred different "liberties" (Finsen 42). There is one provision that legally protects animals it says, "No man shall exercise any tyranny or cruelty toward any animal." (Finsen 42).

According to Thomas Aquinas "Animals lack souls and therefore have no rights, humans have souls and therefore shall be given rights." (Woods 7). The way animals are being treated should be looked at as another form of racism; Mr. Aquinas would be considered Speciesist. Speciesism is the view that members of the species Homo Sapiens are superior to members of every other species simply because human beings belong to the "superior" species (Cottrán 21). This term was invented by Richard Ryder in the mid-1970's (Pringle 13). "There is no doubt that animals experience a life... like us, animals can feel pain and fear, but also excitement and satisfaction." (Cottrán 29). The fact that animals are forced to live their lives in very inadequate cages made to prohibit them from moving is very barbaric (Finsen 8). In Laurence Pringle's book The Animal Rights Controversy Peter Singer is quoted, "Many kinds of animals have the capacity both to suffer and to enjoy life." (16). Calves kept in veal crates live boring and frustrating lives and are fed with liquid food, the only have enough room to sit and stand (Finsen 9). In Geraldine Woods' book Animal Experimentation and Testing it says that in 1831 a man named Marshall Hall came up with four rules for scientists who were still using animal vivisection in their work:
